In November 2019, DTU became the first private in Vietnam to join the list of the top 500 Asian Universities, according to QS World University Rankings.

To build on previous achievements, the DTU Board of Provosts agreed that the university must focus even more on high-quality international partnerships into the future, by copyrighting and sharing the latest educational technology. Previous successes include the co-founding the Passage to ASEAN (P2A), in June 2012, for “ASEAN Solidarity, Cooperation, Peace, Stability and Development”, broadening opportunities for students to access, work in and learn about other ASEAN cultures, restructuring all 1,800 majors to become more practically oriented, and by sending 450 lecturers to universities in the US and other countries to study the latest teaching methods.

The university team will continue to work closely together to achieve their common goal to recreate an institution which strictly complies with the objectives set by the university, a university environment where “Education is linked with research, built on a modern, humanitarian foundations”.
