

DTU Ranked among Asia's Top 500 Universities by Quacquarelli Symonds

Quacquarelli Symonds (QS), a UK-based company specializing in education and overseas studies, has just published its 2019-2020 rankings of Asia's top 500 educational institutions, which now includes Duy Tan University, the first & largest private university in Central Vietnam.

The screenshot shows the QS Asia University Rankings interface. At the top, it says "QS Asia University Rankings" and "In association with: THE UNIVERSITY OF AUCKLAND NEW ZEALAND". Below this is a search bar with "University search" and a location filter set to "Vietnam". The main table lists universities with their logos, names, "More" links, and locations. The entry for "Duy Tan University" is highlighted with a red box. The table also includes a "COMPARE" button and a "STARS" rating column.

DTU is named in Asia's top 500

QS has been compiling university rankings since 2004, when it published the first "QS World University Rankings." Since then, the rankings have become one of the world's most authoritative sources of comparative information on university performance.

In Asia, QS uses the following ranking criteria: academic reputation (30%), institutional prestige (20%), faculty/student ratio (10%), international research (10%), citations per paper (10%), papers per faculty (5%), and the proportions of PhDs (5%), foreign faculty (2.5%), foreign students (2.5%), inbound foreign exchange students (2.5%), and outbound foreign exchange students (2.5%).

DTU's highest individual score was for the proportion of foreign faculty members.

DTU finished up in the 451-500 grouping and seven other Vietnamese universities have also been listed over the past few years. They are the Vietnamese National University in Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City and the Hanoi University of Science and Technology, both in 2015; the University of Hue and Can Tho University, in 2017; and the University of Danang and Ton Duc Thang University, in 2019.
