The two-day course was run by Ms. Nguyen Thi My Chau, who is a senior lecturer at the International Labor Organization (ILO). Participants learned what qualifications were required in business, how to come up with new business ideas, how to make financial plans and the basic steps to implement a start-up project. DTU students also had the opportunity to learn about the experiences of several successful business people in Danang.

According to Mr. Nguyen Tien Dung, students acquired a basic concept of how to run a business after the course. He emphasized: “Running one’s own business is not that difficult. It could be a coffee shop, a small restaurant or a motorbike cleaning shop. The most important thing is to be well prepared and have a positive outlook. Hopefully, the Vietnam Business Forum newspaper will continue to work with DTU to offer more courses to help DTU students plan their own careers.”

Talking about his own unimaginable difficulties encountered since the inception of DTU, Mr. Le Cong Co advised “It is very critical for you to take part in such courses and you should take full advantage of them”
